

CONFESSIONS TO SAVE ANOTHER.

McCarthy Declared He Committed the Crime for Which Doran Was Arrested.

"Judge, I Did the Trick," He Cried: "This Other Fellow Had Nothing to Do with It."

WANTED TO SAVE THE INNOCENT.

Doran's Young Wife Wept While McCarthy Made His Statement—An Unusual Scene in a Brooklyn Police Court.

It is possible to find a handsome man than Charles McCarthy. He has the stamp of the sun on his face and the shifty, quick eyes that the police know so well. But notwithstanding all this, McCarthy is not all bad, and the good that is in him came to the surface yesterday when he and William Doran were arraigned before Justice Walsh in the Adams Street Police Court, Brooklyn, charged with theft.

"Judge, I did the trick," he said, and for once his eyes were not shifty, but steady and clear. "I am the guilty one. This other fellow hadn't nothing to do with it. I want to make a clean breast of the whole thing and save this man if I can."

Doran looked at McCarthy in surprise, and his young wife, in the rear of the room, began to cry softly. The Justice himself was surprised and glanced sharply at the thief. McCarthy's glance never left. "This man is innocent, Judge; that's straight," he went on. "When I seen the cops pull him I felt like givin' myself up. I 'clarify' him then. I'm sorry for him, because he's straight, and he got pinched for what I did."

"Wait a minute, McCarthy," said Justice Walsh. "I want to tell you that any admission you make on oath will be used against you."

"I know that," said the prisoner. "I know what this means for me, but I know it's the right thing. I'll tell you how it was. I live with me sister at No. 363 State avenue, here in Brooklyn. I needed some money Monday, and I walked over from the Bridge to New York to borrow some from a fellow we call Johnny Upton, who lives in Cherry street. He didn't give up, and I came back. I thought I might lift something out of the crowd what was watchin' the parade. I saw an old fellow, and thinkin' he was dead easy, I lifted his watch. He'd never knowed it if the chain hadn't caught in a button of my coat."

Justice Walsh arrested, and I felt bad. I saw Doran arrested, and I felt before that." This was McCarthy's story. The man from whom he took the watch was Stewart J. Donnelly, of No. 255 Barbery street. While watching the circus parade Monday morning he felt a push and a tug at his watch. Then he discovered that the timepiece was gone. He grabbed Doran, who lives at No. 145 East Twenty-fifth street, New York, and accused him of having jostled him. Doran protested that he was innocent, but McCarthy insisted that he was the thief.

Half an hour later Detective Burke arrested McCarthy, and found Donnelly's watch in the lining of his hat. The prisoner at once confessed he had taken it from "a dead-easy old bloke," and added:

"You got a feller for this, but he's innocent. That's right; he had nothin' to do with it."

In court yesterday morning the lawyer who was to appear for the pair gave up the case, because neither would abide by his advice. Donnelly on the stand positively identified Doran as the man who had jostled him.

Doran said earnestly:

"Judge, it is true. I am innocent. I work in a power in Lexington avenue, New York. I went there fourteen months ago, through a letter from Alexander E. Orr, who knows me. I never was arrested before in my life."

Justice Walsh said he would investigate Doran's story, and if it was true, would release him to-morrow. McCarthy was held for the Grand Jury.

PARTED FOREVER BY LAW.

Court Will Not Permit Mrs. Monjo-Solomon to See Her Children by a Former Marriage.

Kate Monjo-Solomon, whose husband was divorced from her in 1886, yesterday made another effort to get permission to see her children. Justice Clement, of Brooklyn, who heard the application, said he must deny it. Mrs. Solomon had lost her right to litigation, or to prove her innocence by allowing her husband, Monjo, to secure judgment by default.

There are three children—Emma, aged fourteen, who is a student at Mount St. Agatha Academy; Joseph, thirteen years old, and Domingo, twenty-one years old. Justice Clement said the boys were old enough to decide if they wished to visit her mother or to allow her to see them. It was different, however, with the girl. She was under age and had expressed her unwillingness to have anything to do with her mother.

BIG BROOKLYN REALTY DEAL.

Flatbush Avenue Company Buys the Johnston Building for $375,000.

The Flatbush Avenue Realty Company, which is controlled by A. Abraham and his associates of the firm of Abraham & Straus, has purchased the Johnston Building, one of the principal Brooklyn business structures. It has a frontage of 113 feet on Flatbush avenue, 212 on Nevins street and 113 feet on Livingston street. The price paid was $375,000.

Coverly & Co. and Wise & Sons have long leases on the building, paying $20,000 a year rental. The company intends to purchase other buildings in the neighborhood.

Money for Bricks in Passaic.

Passaic, N. J., April 29.—The National Brick and Terra Cotta Company was recently organized at this place, with a capital stock of $150,000. The organization was effected by the purchase of the following officers elected: G. D. Bogart, president; Joseph H. Wright, vice-president; and William Malcolm, secretary and treasurer. The Board of Directors is composed of G. D. Bogart, J. H. Wright, B. W. Spencer, Richard Morrell, C. J. Cadmus, W. R. Brown and Andrew McLean.

South Jersey Railroad Extension.

Sea Isle City, April 29.—The New Ocean City branch of the South Jersey Railroad is being pushed rapidly to completion. Three miles of the right to be built has been finished and Contractor Rotan is now at work on the big bridge. Three hundred men are employed. The work will cost $150,000. The road will be completed and in operation by June 1.

How are your kidneys? If sick, Dr. Hobbs' Spargus Kidney Pills will cure them. *

Brooklyn Firemen to Have More Pay.

Albany, April 29.—Only the crush of business in the Senate to-morrow will prevent an increase in the pay of the officers of Brooklyn's Fire Department. The bill making this provision was passed by the Assembly to-day without debate. It was introduced by Mr. Audett, and is intended to put the officers of the Fire Department of Brooklyn on an equal footing with those of New York City. It has been a popular measure from the start, which is more than can be said of most of the legislation advocated by Brooklyn Republicans this session.

Mr. Audett was also successful in getting favorable action in the Assembly on his bill providing for the appointment of two Electrical Subway Commissioners. The Mayor is to name the men within twenty days after the bill becomes a law, but the Commissioners are not to take office until November 1. It is just possible that they will not take office at all, as the bill may not be reached by the Senate to-morrow. Senator Wry's bill authorizing the city to issue permits for corporations to occupy the streets was passed by the House and now goes to the Governor.

The bill providing for three additional Justices in Brooklyn went through the Assembly this afternoon. It was introduced and urged by Mr. Hughes, and makes three good places worth $9,000 per year, which, if passed, will have to be filled by election. Instead of by machine appointment. Senator McNulty's bill providing for the discharge of liens was also passed. Other bills to get through were Mr. Waldo's, authorizing the improvement of Prospect avenue and providing for the organization of a trust company in the Twenty-ninth Ward.

The passage of Senator Wry's bill to keep railroads off Park place and Sterling place calls attention to the unusual number of such exemptions this session. Dozens of streets have been placed out of the reach of the trolley companies, and more would have been exempted had the session been extended. The long list of accidents placed the Legislature in a proper frame of mind to pass all such bills that were offered. The Audett bill requiring hydrostatic test for boilers in Brooklyn passed the Senate this afternoon and will probably become a law. It was advocated by the city authorities as a necessary safeguard, although the introducer did not know what it was intended to do and took no particular interest in it.

AN ATHLETE'S ROMANCE.

Former Champion Nicoll Marries the Sweetheart of His Boyhood, After Years of Separation.

Special interest and romance surrounded the marriage of Mr. E. C. Nicoll, of Brooklyn, and Miss Lillian Bode, of London, England, which was solemnized in the old Fleet Street Methodist Episcopal Church last evening.

Mr. Nicoll was for several years one of America's foremost amateur athletes. "In the Autumn of 1894 he took a trip to the Bahama Islands and there renewed his courtship with Miss Bode, which had been interrupted by a quarrel many years before. The courtship of Mr. Nicoll and Miss Bode began in Nassau, Bahama, where both were school children. Miss Bode's father was the late Byron Nicoll, French Consul to the Bahama Islands.

After the first misunderstanding between Mr. Nicoll and Miss Bode the latter went to London, and for the last ten years has lived in that city and Paris.

Mr. Nicoll, shortly after his arrival in this country, settled in Brooklyn and was soon a prominent figure in athletic sports. He developed into a champion walker, and from 1888 to 1892 won many first prizes in walking contests. He was one of the original members of the old Manhattan Athletic Club, and in 1892, in the contest between a team from England and representatives of the old Manhattan Athletic Club, of which Mr. Nicoll was a member, he helped materially to keep the championship in this country. For the next two years Mr. Nicoll took part in many international amateur walks for Long Island. His record in the eight-mile run—42 minutes 3/4 seconds—stood for two years.

The bride of last night arrived in this country from London last Saturday, after a series of letters had passed between her and Mr. Nicoll. She is a charming young woman, accomplished, and has hosts of friends.

The ceremony last evening was conducted by the Rev. Otto Bartholow. The best man was Robert Ross, and Miss Tansy Bartholow acted as bridesmaid. The happy couple held a reception after the ceremony, which was attended by many of Mrs. Nicoll's former friends. The bride's party was received. Later Mr. and Mrs. Nicoll left town on a brief wedding tour, and upon their return they will live at No. 101 North Portland avenue.

MURDEROUS HIGHWAYMEN

Keyser Boelen Beaten and Robbed and Thrown into the Peconic River by Two Men.

Riverhead, L. I., April 29.—Two robbers held up Keyser Boelen here last night, and at the pistol's point compelled him to give up a gold watch and $125. Boelen was beaten and tossed headlong into Peconic River.

George Brown passed the place a few minutes after the assault and pulled Boelen out of the water. He is in a precarious condition, and will probably die. Boelen came into town last night to visit some friends. He inquired where the folks he wanted to see lived, and finally met two strangers. They volunteered to direct him. The strangers took Boelen to the Peconic street dam. There one of them pulled a pistol and the other grabbed Boelen's watch. Boelen struggled at first, but when the pistol was pointed at his head he submitted.

All his valuables were taken from him, and he was tossed into the river. Brown's attention was called to Boelen when he heard groans from the river. Brown looked over the dam and saw Boelen's body floating about. Then he took a boat and hauled the man ashore. The authorities have a good description of the highwaymen and will make a search for them.

SURFACE TRACKS MAY GO.

Future of the Atlantic Avenue Railroad to Be Decided by a Commission.

There is a prospect that the Atlantic Avenue Railroad tracks, which cut Brooklyn in two, will be depressed below the surface of the street. Governor Morton has signed the Waldo bill, which provides for a commission to consider the matter. The body is to consider whether it is best to depress, elevate or remove the tracks altogether.

The road begins at Flatbush and Fifth avenues and runs along Atlantic avenue to the city line at Euclid street, a distance of five miles. The franchise is owned by the Atlantic Avenue Railroad Company, but was leased to the Long Island Railroad Company for ninety-nine years. Since 1878 cars were first placed on the avenue, over six hundred accidents, many of them fatal, have occurred.

MISS FLETCHER MADE A MINISTER'S BRIDE.

Charming Brooklyn Belle Married to the Rev. William Morrison.

Ceremony Performed by Bishop Coleman in the Church of Which the Groom Is Pastor.

THE ALTAR A BOWER OF FLOWERS.

All Saints Crowded to the Doors by Admirable Friends—Reception at the Bride's Father's House—The Couple Will Live in Brooklyn.

One of the largest and prettiest weddings of the season was held in All Saints' Church, Seventh street and Seventh avenue, Brooklyn, last evening, when its rector, the Rev. William Morrison, was married to Miss Myrtle Fletcher, daughter of Mr. C. H. Fletcher.

The church was crowded to its doors with members of the fashionable set, many of the people standing on the seats to get a glimpse of the bride and her attendants. Two great columns of Easter lilies guarded the chancel, which was a mass of green palms forming lacelike dais for the beautiful altar, decked with lilies and brilliantly lighted.

The march, under the direction of Mr. James Pringle, master of ceremonies, was decidedly novel and picturesque. First came the ushers—Mr. James McElhinney, Mr. R. B. Ailing, Mr. William Gould, Mr. B. Andley, Mr. F. Schaffner and Mr. William Holcomb. The walked up the middle aisle alone at first and met the maid of honor, the bride's sister, Miss Ettye Fletcher, and the four bridesmaids—Miss Eva Drake, Miss Edna Bennett, cousin of the bride; Miss Ada Arthur, and Miss Lucille Fletcher, sister of the bride.

Miss Ettye Fletcher was gowned in pale pink broad satin, made with a short Louis XV. coat, cut low at the neck and set off by a little vest of spangled chiffon. Her bouquet was of pink sweet peas. The other attendants wore white brocade, made in the same way and carried bunches of Easter lilies.

The ushers lined up at the chancel steps, the maids passed between them, and all walked slowly down the aisle to meet the bride and her father.

She looked very pretty, in pearl white satin, made with a large train, and her tulle veil was caught at intervals with sprays of natural orange blossoms. It fell from a coronet of these over her face and partially concealed a rich garbure of pearls and diamonds which, with ruffles of duchesse point, made the yoke of her high-necked bodice. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and maiden hair fern.

Two little children, a flower girl and page, Adel and Earl Gulick, preceded her, walking between her and the other attendants. The bridegroom and his best man, the Rev. John M. Page, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York, met her at the chancel steps, where the betrothed service was performed by the Rev. Dr. David H. Greer, rector of St. Bartholomew's Church, New York. After it the bridegroom, followed by the maids and children, approached the altar, where Bishop Coleman, of Delaware, concluded the marriage service and pronounced the benediction. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played as the bridal party left the church.

From the church the guests were driven to Mr. Fletcher's residence, No. 143 Lincoln place, Brooklyn, where a large reception was held. Before it the bride changed her high bodice for a low-necked one, trimmed with lace and pearls. She and her husband received the congratulations of their friends in the drawing room, where they stood against a screen of lilies and palms arranged between the windows. The doors and chandeliers were festooned with lilies and smilax, and lilies were banked on the mantels.

The second drawing room was also trimmed with these flowers, and one corner hidden behind a curtain of evergreen, back of which the musicians were stationed. An elaborate buffet supper was served. The table was most effectively decorated with yellow ribbons and flowers.

Among the guests were: Bishop and Mrs. Coleman, Wilmington; Archdeacon Alsop, Rev. Lindsay Parker, John C. Clements, Dr. Pratt, Leonard Moody, Mr. and Mrs. James Dykeman, Miss Dykeman, Mr. Joseph Frothingham, Mr. and Mrs. Brent Good, Miss Good, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grant, Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Hoesman, Mr. and Mrs. Klesman, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lefferts, Mr. Frank Lefferts, Orange, N. J.; Mr. Alfred C. Mason, Philadelphia; Mr. John Marquand, the Misses Rosseter, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Olcott, Miss Olcott, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Ogden, Rev. and Mrs. George R. Van de Water, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Steers, Miss V. Steers, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Wagstaff, Mr. and Mrs. Orr, Mr. A. P. Stafford, Mrs. Delatour and Mr. and Mrs. Hagan.

After the reception Mr. Morrison and his bride left for Washington. Upon their return from their wedding journey they will reside at No. 15 Polhemus place.

MATTHEWS LEFT A MILLION.

His Widow Will Receive the Income of $70,000 as Long as She Remains Single.

William Matthews' will was admitted to probate by Surrogate Abbott in Brooklyn yesterday. It is supposed he left $1,000,000. Mrs. Matthews is to have the annual income of $70,000, while single, and of $85,000 if she remarries. His children inherit the rest of the estate, except the sum of $15,000. The Church Charity Foundation Society is to receive $1,000 and the London Orphan Asylum $500.

Thomas Carman's will disposed of a $100,000 estate. Ernest Von A left an estate valued at $250,000, which is to be divided among the children and grandchildren.

CHANCE FOR BROOKLYN BOYS.

Competitive Examinations for Cadetships to West Point and Annapolis.

Congressman Charles G. Bennett, of Brooklyn, has at his disposal the appointment of two cadets, one for West Point and the other for the Naval Academy at Annapolis. He has decided to give every boy in the Fifth Congressional District a chance to become an Admiral in the navy or the General of the United States Army.

He has arranged for a competitive examination to be held Saturday at the rooms of the Board of Education on Livingston street.

A PLUCKY WOMAN CORNERS A BURGLAR.

Mrs. Mary Woods Finds a Man in Her Parlor and Makes Him a Prisoner.

He Crouches in a Corner While a Domestic Goes Out to Find a Policeman.

PLEADS TO BE ALLOWED TO GO.

The Woman, However, Turns Him Over to the Officer—When Searched, Several Pieces of Mrs. Woods's Jewelry Are Found in His Pockets.

Mrs. Mary Woods held up a burglar who entered her house, No. 231 Forty-eighth street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Woods was sitting in her dining room, when she heard footsteps in the parlor. She is not big or powerful, but full of nerve and indifferently to danger. She went upstairs cautiously and peered into the parlor, but could see no one.

Mrs. Woods continued her search and finally discovered Charles Roman in the back parlor. "What are you doing here?" she asked in a tone that made him tremble. Looking around for a chance to escape, the burglar made a rush for the door, but Mrs. Woods headed him off.

She called for the domestic and sent her out for an officer. Patrolman Madigan hurried to the house and found Roman crouched in a corner pleading with Mrs. Woods not to have him arrested. He was searched.

Mrs. Woods's earrings, a diamond ring, a diamond heart and a ring were found in his pocket. Roman was taken to the Forty-third Street Police Station and looked up.

ROBBED OF HIS SAVINGS.

Di Angellis Lost $300 He Had Saved to Return to His Home in Italy.

Giuseppe Lassaso and Raffaele Douzi, Italians, living at No. 224 Union avenue, Williamsburg, were arraigned yesterday in the Lee Avenue Police Court on a charge of larceny. The complainant was Felice Di Angellis, a fellow countryman, living at No. 30 Withers street.

On Sunday evening Di Angellis attended a christening at the home of Douzi, where he says he was drugged and then robbed of $300 money he had saved to return to his native land. According to Di Angellis the money was in the pockets of a pair of trousers he wore beneath a second pair. The pockets of both were cut out. Di Angellis suspected Douzi of the robbery because the latter knew he had the money and wanted to borrow $100, which he refused to loan. Both prisoners were held for trial. Di Angellis is almost frantic over his loss.

Fatally Injured by a Fall.

Jamalo, L. I., April 29.—While walking to his home on Puntine street, this village, last night, Jesse Brown, a well-known resident, was seized with a fit. He fell heavily to the ground and struck face downward, breaking both his jawbones. He was carried to his home unconscious. He died half an hour later without recovering his senses. He was eighty-seven years of age.

THE JOURNAL

next Sunday will have 44 pages packed with news and special features, and a Handsome Colored Picture will be given every purchaser.

It will be necessary to order it at once to insure getting a copy.

Three cents is all it costs—and it will be the best Sunday paper to be had at any price.

WOMAN ACCUSED REFORMER HALE.

Patrick Diver's Former Opponent Arraigned in a Brooklyn Police Court.

Mrs. Martha Porter Charged Him with Having Pushed Her from His House to the Street.

HALE CONDUCTED HIS DEFENSE.

He Aroused Complainant's Indignation by Shaking His Finger at Her—The Charge Dismissed and Mrs. Porter Placed Under Peace Bonds.

Justice Tighe, in the Butler Street Police Court, Brooklyn, yesterday morning checked off one by one the minor cases that came before him, and then prepared for the real work of the day. Every one in the courtroom was excited. The court officials buttoned their coats, the stenographer opened a new book and the clerk of the court cleared his throat and cried in a loud voice:

"The people of the State of New York against William H. Hale."

Then there stepped to the bar a man who loves reform for reform's sake. William H. Hale, the opponent of Patrick Diver in New York, the one-time honor man at Yale, the another-time candidate of Tammany for Mayor of New York, was accused of assault by a woman. The woman was Mrs. Martha Porter. She formerly lived in the house which Hale owns, at No. 40 First place, Brooklyn. A little matter of $120, said to be due for room rent, caused the trouble between the Hales and Mrs. Porter.

Hale stood like a statue of dignity, beside the Justice's desk, while the complainant clambered into the witness chair, lifted the Bible to her lips and looked expectantly at Justice Tighe.

"Your name?" said the latter.

"Is Mrs. Martha Porter," said the witness promptly.

"And?"

"Your Honor, I want a jury trial," broke in Hale.

"I don't think it is necessary in this case," said Justice Tighe.

Lawyer Hale thought it all over and then said:

"I demand it."

"The easiest way out of this is the best," said the Justice. "Proceed with the examination."

Mrs. Porter at once began to enlighten the court on the state of affairs as she saw it. Hale, claiming that she owed him $120, had held her garments when she called for them on March 17 she had been spoken of as "that woman" by Mrs. Hale.

Mr. Hale leaned his head on his hand and the witness shook her parol at him.

"I am a lady, sir!" she exclaimed.

"This man shoved me down the stairs and into the street," she went on, turning to the Justice.

Mr. Hale raised his voice. "Do you mean to say in the presence of this Court that I assaulted you?" he asked, his finger levelled at the witness.

"Don't you poke your finger at me, sir!" she answered.

"Where is your home?"

"None of your business."

"You must tell him," interrupted Justice Tighe.

"Yes, you must tell me," said Hale.

"Now, where do you live?"

"Don't you talk to me, sir," said the witness.

Justice Tighe interposed again and Mrs. Porter said she lived in Third street.

Hale and Mrs. Hale testified that Mrs. Porter had not been assaulted, and the complaint was dismissed.

There was another matter to be disposed of, however. Mrs. Hale accused Mrs. Porter of having disturbed the public peace by visiting her on April 25, pulling the doorbell, spitting in her face and cursing her. Mrs. Porter said all this was untrue, but she was placed under bonds to keep the peace.

Hale then announced that he wanted to charge Mrs. Porter with malicious prosecution and perjury, but Justice Tighe, seeing "We've had enough for to-day," and the lawyer left the court.

MARINE NEWS.

PORT OF NEW YORK.

ALMANAC TO-DAY.

Sun rises.....5:00 a.m. Moon rises.....11:12 p.m. Sun sets.....6:04 p.m. Moon sets.....12:29 noon

HIGH AND LOW WATER TO-DAY.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND. SANDY HOOK.

H. W. L. W. H. W. L. W. 9:56 a.m. 4:02 a.m. 9:58 a.m. 8:32 a.m. 10:14 p.m. 4:04 p.m. 9:56 a.m. 8:32 p.m.

Incoming Steamships.

ARRIVED YESTERDAY.

St. Hudson, Kemble, New Orleans, April 23, with mds. and passengers to E. S. Allen.

St. Nueces, Rial, Galveston and Key West, with mds. and passengers to C. H. Mallory & Co.

St. Trochu, Berne, Jacksonville, with mds. and passengers to W. F. Clyde & Co.

St. Majestic (Br.), Smith, Liverpool, with mds. and 1,398 passengers to H. Mailand & Key.

St. H. Meler (Ger.), Schmolder, Bremen, April 17, with mds. and 1,074 passengers to Geltrich & Co.

St. Southwold (Br.), Mills, Antwerp, April 18, with mds. and 579 passengers to International Navigation Co.

St. Panama (Fr.), Chabot, Bordeaux, April 12, with mds. and passengers to Funch, Edye & Co.

St. Athalia (Nor.), Wolberg, Hamburg, April 15, and Cherbourg, with mds. to Simpson, Spruce & Young.

St. Chester (Dutch), Boyen, Rotterdam, April 15, in ballast to C. H. Randerhook, Gibber, New York.

St. Glanahon (Br.), Walters, Havana, April 12, with sulphur ore to Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Co., vessel to meet.

DEPARTURE TO-DAY.

St. Belgravia, Gibraltar, ss. Vasco, London, April 30; Belgravia, London, April 21; ss. Yucatan, Havana, April 25; ss. Norge, Christianstad, April 21; ss. Hibernian, Glasgow, April 17; ss. El Sol, New Orleans, April 23.

DEPARTURE TO-MORROW.

St. Lucania, Liverpool, April 29; ss. Columbia, Hamburg, April 22; ss. Spruce, Bremen, April 21; ss. British Queen, Antwerp, April 18; ss. Scutaria, Hamburg, April 19; ss. Exeter City, Swansea, April 17; ss. Oscar L., Cardiff, April 17.

DEPARTURE SATURDAY.

St. Algonquin, Jacksonville, April 29; ss. Georgia, Gibraltar, April 18; ss. Braunschweig, Gibber, April 19; ss. Hibernian, Glasgow, April 18; ss. Martin, Hull, April 18; ss. New York, Southampton, April 20; ss. Romsdalen, Gibber, April 17; ss. Santa Rosa, Nassau, April 20; ss. Trinidad, Bermuda, April 30.

DEPARTURE SUNDAY.

St. Amalfi, Hamburg, April 15; ss. La Bourgeoise, Havre, April 23; ss. Manitou, Swansea, April 18.